Movement for the Canonization of the Discoverer of America.

Cardinal Richelmy, Archbishop of Turin, has accepted the presidency of an international committee which is being formed in Italy for the commemoration of the fourth centennial of the death of Christopher Columbus, on May 20, 1906, by the of Christon of a magnificent monument in the Vati-can to the great discoverer of America. At the same time steps are being taken to recall to life the movement for his canonization.

It is not generally known that at the Vatican uncil thirty-six years ago a large number of the archbishops and bishops present signed a pe-tition urging Pius IX to admit the inauguration of the necessary steps to this end in the Congregation of Rites. And even after, the council preiates in different parts of the world made individal appeals to the Holy See about the matter.

The late Count de Lorgues spent his entire life a collecting evidence destined to support the claims of Columbus to canonization and in vindi-cating his memory from certain charges alleged mainst him. But since the count's death the af-fair has been allowed to drop, and it is only now that it is being taken up again, in connection with the quadricentennial of the death of Columbus, who may, after all, become—for the Roman Cath-olics, at any rate—the patron saint of America.

AN IMPERIAL HONEYMOON.

Hubertusstock, where Germany's Crown Prince their honeymoon, is a big, overgrown, two storied chalet surrounded by a number of smaller wooden awelling houses of picturesque design in the midst of a dense forest, some hundred yards distant from the Werbellin Lake, and is the favorite shooting lodge of the Kaiser, owing to its proximity to the capital and its complete privacy. The latter is such. ndeed, that during the closing years of the reign of King Frederick William IV he was frequently taken out for weeks together to Hubertusstock by his attendants, who found that the entire absence of all excitement and the extraordinary solitude of the place exercised a soothing, calming influence upon his mind and diminished the recurrences of the attacks of vicience that constituted a feature of

Within the limits of the immense imperial preserves is the celebrated Schorfhaide, which each year toward the month of November becomes the meeting place of thousands of stags. They come from all parts of Germany and Austria, even from Russia, this being rendered possible by the proximity to one another of the great estates of the territorial nobility, so that it would be feasible to march almost from the Adriatic to the Baltic without ever leaving forest glades. This annual assem-blage of stags on the Schorfhaide has been taking place every autumn for untold centuries. In fact, mention thereof has been found in documents more than a thousand years old. The meetings afford an extraordinary sight and are the scenes of numer-ous single combats to death between "royals," the other stags and deer standing round as if to form a huge amphitheatre and gravely watching the duel without making any attempt to interfere.

All sorts of theories have been put forward with regard to this annual concourse of stags on the Schorfhalde. Foresters, however, insist that it is nothing more nor less than a species of great ani-mal congress, at which the various antiered tribes mai congress, at which the various antiered tribes meet for a big palaver to decide matters affecting the policy and the leadership of their various clans. Far fetched as this idea may seem at first sight, it is evident that there is something of the kind which brings stags and their mates from the remote forests of Galicia, on the Russian border; from the vast Liechtenstein game preserves to the south of Vienna, and from the still larger sporting premerty of Belyer, in Hungary, belonging to Archproperty of Belyer, in Hungary, belonging to Arch-duke Frederick, all the way to the Schorfhaide, on the reedy banks of the Werbellin Lake, in order to flock together by the thousands.

It is a matter of forest ethics and of the law of the chase to abstain from disturbing this annual "convivium" of the stage, as it is called, and while it lasts not a single shot is to be heard in the forests around Hubertusstock. In fact, November has on this account become a species of close season there are one interested in species wishing to do. there, no one interested in sports wishing to do anything that could in the least degree interfere with this, so far as I know, altogether unique cus-tom in the animal world. The meetings, however, have been witnessed by the Emperor and a few chosen companions, who concealed themselves in branches of trees, bordering on the Schorfhalde, and William is never tired of expatiating on the magnificence of the spectacle presented.

KING LEOPOLD'S ANARCHIST CHAUFFEUR.

That anarchists are the sworn foes of royalty in general and of monarchs in particular has once nore been demonstrated by the attempt made at Paris the other day to subject the nineteen-year old King of Spain to the same appalling fate as that which fell to the share of Grand Duke Sergius last winter, and which nearly a quarter of century previously had overtaken his father, the ill fated Emperor Alexander II. Yet there is one ruler who is apparently indifferent to the danger which these foes of law and order constitute to every throne. For King Leopold of Belgium actualemploys a man known to be imbued with anarchist doctrines as his trusted chauffeur. True, Marcel-that is the individual's name-has never been implicated in any outrage. But the police, not only of Belgium, but also of France and of Germany, have warned the King that Marcel has all sorts of anarchist affiliations, and that he has professed both in writing and at anarchist and professed both in which socialist meetings his entire sympathy with snarchist doctrines. Yet all the notice that Leopold has taken of these warnings has been to give a cynical smile, and to invariaby use the word "citoyen" (citizen) in addressing his chauffeur, that being the title which by official decree supplanted all others-even that of "Monsieur"-in the days of the Terror, after the first great revolution in France at the close of the eighteenth century.

When one reflects upon the extent to which one is obliged to depend upon one's chauffeur in motoring-especially at the tremendous rate of speed at which Leopold always travels-it must be confessed that there is something particularly daring on the part of this King in intrusting his safety to a man such as Marcel, imbued with those doctrines which lead anarchists readily to sacrifice their own lives in endeavoring to "temper tyranny by assassination.'

A HEALTHY BOURBON APPETITE.

All the stories that had been current in Paris and London concerning the alleged delleacy of consti-tution and frailty of health of young King Alfonso have been dissipated by his appetite, which has ex-cited the admiration of all beholders as being truly Bourbon. The members of that house, especially its kings, have from time immemorial been celebrated for their prowess with the knife and fork, and have been noted as "des fourchettes de premier King Louis XVIII not only ate all day long, but insisted on having a couple of cold roast chickens and a bottle of fine old Burgundy placed on a table by his bed when retiring to rest after a copious supper, and, although in the morning nothing would be left of the birds but the bones, he would nevertheless awake hungry.

It was in consequence of the obesity produced by the copiousness of his meals that his physicians ingisted on his using carriages without any springs, so that the terrible joining produced by the coble-siones, with which Paris and Versailles were in those days abominably paved, might promote his digestion. It was, however, terribly hard on the gentlemen in waiting who accompanied him, and upon the pages of honor who rode on the steps, and two old noblemen whom I knew at Paris, aspecially the old Marquis de Channailles, were wont shudder at the remembrance of the tortures which they had undergone when doing duty as pages to King Louis XVIII. It is not astonishing under the circumstances that most of the members of the House of Bourbon have succumbed to stomachic troubles, which led in several instances to reports that they had been poisoned, although they had merely died from the poisoned, although they had merely died from the effects of overeating. With regard to young Don Alfonso, he is, of course, young and growing, and, and being extraordinarily active, takes an immense being extraordinarily active, takes an immense of amount of exercise, being, in fact, always on the amount of exercise, being, in fact, always on the gard an older man would result injuriously merely of an older man would result injuriously merely serves to build him up and to furnish, one might serves to build him up and to furnish, one might ergy. He takes at 8 o'clock in the morating a ergy. He takes at 8 o'clock in the morating a breakflast comprising a very rare beefsteak and breakflast compri different courses; at 5 o'clock a sort of "gouter," consisting of tea, liqueurs, sandwiches and cakes and slices of cold chicken or game birds, while at 8 o'clock there is a dinner which lasts until past s. Sometimes he takes a few more sandwiches or bis cuits before retiring for the night.

DR. HAAS NOT THERE

Services in Memory of 1,031 Victims of Slocum Disaster.

The anniversary of the General Slocum disaster was observed yesterday in Middle Village, Long Island, and in this city. The dissensions which arose over the administration of the fund that was collected for the benefit of the survivors of the disaster were recalled in the afternoon by the absence of the Rev. Dr. George C. F. Haas, pastor of St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church, at the unveiling of a monument in the Lutheran Cemetery, in Middle Village. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of the Organization of Slocum Survivors, of which Charles Dersch is president. The organization is composed of a few members of Dr. Haas's church and a large number of outsiders, who were dissatisfied with the money they received at the time of the distribution of the fund.

The monument was unveiled by Adelaide Liebenew, an infant eighteen months old, the youngest survivor of the disaster, in the presence of 15,000 persons. The child was held in the arms of her mother, with whom she escaped from death a year ago. The monument commemorates the loss of 1.031 lives, according to the official count.

The police yesterday prevented a possible dis-aster at the cemetery. A stand large enough to seat about a thousand persons had been erected close to the draped monument, but when Inspector Kane saw it he ordered it be kept empty. It was so filmsily constructed that it could not possibly have stood up under the load it was intended

The speakers at the unveiling were Coroner O'Gorman, of The Bronx; Charles Dersch, the Rev. Dr. John C. Fagg, the Rev. Henry Mueller and Bishop Potter, who also pronounced the benediction. As the monument was unveiled, representa-tives of the United Singing Societies of Manhattan. Brookiyn and Queens sang "Schottischer Baden-The singing of this selection was begun just as the last notes of "The Holy City," sung as a solo by Miss Hattie Jacobie, died away, and as the chorus swelled the drapings fell away.

Dr. Haas last night refused to discuss his ab-sence from the ceremonies in Middle Village. One of the members of his church said:

There is practically no split in our membership over this fund affair. The church has been better attended since the disaster than ever before. The Sunday school, which lost all but two hundred of its eight hundred members, has since received two hundred recruits. The day school is flourishing. There is an unusual interest displayed in all church enterprises.

The services at the church last night were extremely simple. Over the doorway through which the people entered was an American flag, draped with crape. The interior of the edifice was free from decorations, excepting that the altar and the lectern were draped in crape, as at funerals. The people who fined the 750 scats and stood in the back of the church were all in mourning. The black dresses of the women were occasionally relieved by a white waist or hat. In the audience were several ministers, including the Rev. Dr. A. Richter, paster of the Hoboken Evangelical Lutheran Church, and the Rev. Dr. Gustave Doering, of the Emigrant House, in State-st.

PRINCESS MARGARET OF CONNAUGHT AND PRINCE GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS OF SWEDEN, WHO WERE MARRIED IN LONDON YESTERDAY.

ROYAL WEDDING.

of Connaught Married at Windsor.

Windsor, England, June 15 .- Windsor was in holiday attire to-day for the wedding of Princess Margaret of Connaught, eldest daughter of the Duke of Connaught, to Prince Gustavus Adolphus, eldest son of Crown Prince Gustavus of Sweden, all the arrangements for which were made under the personal direction of King Edward. Through the morning a procession of royal trains ran from London to Windsor, carrying representatives of most of the royal families of Europe. The gathering was one of the most imposing since the King's coronation. Magnificent summer weather greeted the young couple, and showed the pretty town of Windsor at its best.

The scene in St. George's Chapel, which was not decorated except for scattered flowers, was brilliant. There was a blaze of uniforms and decorations. Ladies were in full court dress with coronets or tiaras and many jewels. Shorty after the guests were seated the bridegroom made his appearance, accompanied by his supporters. Princes Eugene and William of Sweden, with the gentlemen in attendance.

The bridegroom was followed by the royal party, including King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Princesa Victoria, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden, the Duchess of Connaught, the Prince of Wales, the Landgrave of Hesse, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden and the Khedive of Egypt, all accompanied by brilliant suites. As Elgar's "Imperial March" was played on the organ, the bride, on the arm of her father, passed from the castle to the chapel. She was met at the entrance by the Lord Chamberlain and the bridesmaids, Prin-Victoria of Battenberg, Princess Mary of Wales and Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg. The bridal party passed up the aisle, preceded by the choir singing "When the God of Old," to the chancel, where a quarter of a century ago the bride's mother and father went through the same ceremory. The Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Bishop of Oxford and others, read the simple service of the Church of England. The wedding gown was a cloud of pure white Irish lace, posed over white satin and strewn with gar'an's of orange blossoms and myrtles. The corsage was cut low and there was the regulation court train. The bride carried a simple bouquet consisting of a sheath of Madonna lilies tied with white satin.

After the ceremony the members of the royal families returned to the castle, where luncheon was served. The wedding cake, which formed the centre piece of the table, was five feet high, consisting of three tiers, the lower tier being three feet in diameter. Overhanging each tier were four balconies, beneath which were figures, modelled in sugar, bearing wheat. The tiers were borne by four silver Grecian columns, and on the top of the cake was a draped female figure supporting a porcelain vase from which hung garlands of flowers.

STOPPED THE CLOCK.

A pigeon roosting on the minute hand of the town clock in the Cass County Courthouse tower last evening stopped the clock at precisely 6:20 and caused many people in Logansport to be an hour late.

The electric light was turned on in the tower, and although the dial was suddenly illuminated, the pigeon was not in the least disturbed and refused to move. A fanitor was obliged to climb the dizzy height and "shoo" the bird away. It was 7:15 o'clock when the mechanism was again in motion. From The Indianapolis Star.

MR. DALRYMPLE IN CHICAGO.

From The Minneapolis Journal.

Maister Jeams Dalrymple, after looking over Chicago, has "gane awa hame" to write his report. There are many indications that he will decide against Chicago undertaking the running of streetcars. In the first piace, he found no evidence that Chicago has any streets on which to run cars. True, he found some openings between the buildings, but these did not belong to the city. While he was in Chicago they were in the sola and exclusive possession of Mr. Cornelius P. Shae. Mr. Shea obligingly gave the President of the United States the privilege of riding over them a few weeks ago. He also permitted Mr. Dalrymple to walk through a few of them under guard, but he did not say whether he was going to let the Mayor and Council run streetcars through his thoroughfares or not. We rather believe Mr. Shea will be obliged to refuse this privilege. There is soarcely room in the streets now for his men to riot in Pesides, streetcars are a nuisance in a street. They have a tendency to spoil the shooting. Several times Mr. Shea's own men were brought in wounded, and every time it was found that some green striker's aim had been spolled by a passing car and he had hit a brother striker instead of a citizen. Such incidents have made Mr. Shea pretty sore on cars.

Another count on which Mr. Dalrymple will be likely to decide against Chicago is politics. In From The Minneapolis Journal.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR HERE.

Gustavus Adolphus and Margaret Famous British Musician to Receive Degree from Yale.

Sir Edward Elgar, who arrived here yesterday from London on the Deutschland, is, if not the most eminent, at least the most widely known, of Great Britain's musicians at the present time His great fame is of recent date, however, and had its beginning with the triumphs celebrated in England, America, Germany and France within the last two years by his oratorio, "The Dream of Gerontius," and two or three of his orchestral works. Less than five years ago his name was all but unknown in America, and, indeed, excited littie more than a local and provincial interest in his native England.

Now, however, his reputation extends through the length and breadth of the four countries mentioned, and it may safely be said that the lovers of choral music in New-York are more familiar with his music than those of London. Within two years there have been at least nine performances of his larger choral works in the American metropolis, a tribute of appreciation quite without example in musical annals for a quarter of a century.

A beginning was made with "The Dream of Gerontius" by the Oratorio Society on March 26, 1908; on April 21 and 22 of the same year the Church Choral Society produced "The Light of Life"; on

SIR EDWARD ELGAR The English composer, who is visiting America

November 20 the Oratorio Society repeated "The Dream of Gerontius," and on February 9, 1904, brought forward "The Apostles," repeating it also on March 24. "King Olaf" was performed by the Brooklyn Oratorio Society in Carnegie Hall on April 29, 1904, and the "Te Deum" and "Benedictus at recitals of the Church Choral Society on February 8 and 9 of this year. Most of his orchestral works have been played here, as well, and it may be said that of his really significant composi only "Caractacus," a secular oratorio, is walting for a New-York hearing. Sir Edward was forty-eight years old on the 2d of this month. Though practically self-educated, he is an "all round" musician as well as com-poser. He has filled the position of organist in a Catholic chapel, and has practical skill on the pianoforte, violin and bassoon. He has conducted musical organizations amateur and professional; sat among the second violins at festivals which are now proud to perform his works, and composed music in nearly all the forms from negro minstrel ditties to tripartite oratorios.

With Lady Eigar he lives in or near a little village called Malvern, where, in the quiet of a retreat five miles from a railway station, he does his creative work. Since Germany began to perform his works, however, he has travelled considerably in that country. France and Italy. He was invited by the New-York Oratorio Society to attend the repetition of "The Dream of Gerontius" in November, 1903, but sent an answer by cable that he was too busily engaged in composition. The third part of "The Apostles" and a symphony having General Gordon for its subject were among the compositions on which he was supposed to be engaged at the time, but nothing has been heard from them since. It is an open secret that one purpose of the present visit is to receive the degree of doctor of music from Yale University at the commencement exercises this month. Cambridge gave him the degree on November 22, 1969, and he was knighted by King Edward in 1904. pianoforte, violin and bassoon. He has conducted
